1107-O-12	U.S. Food &amp; Drug Administration Drug information Update-FDA's Office of Prescription Drug Promotion launches an e-learning CME/CE course and case studies about untruthful or misleading prescription drug promotion  The e-learning course is a one-hour, self-paced training to help HCPs and HCP students learn how to identify prescription drug promotion that may be misleading or raise other regulatory issues and report it to FDA. Specifically, the course is made up of seven modules, including modules on The Bad Ad Program, Principals of Persuasion, FDA Oversight of Prescription Drug Promotion and Marketing, Common Drug Promotion Issues, and Reporting Potential Drug Promotion Issues, and can be taken for CME/CE credit. While anyone can take the course, the target audience is all current and future HCPs, including physicians, physician assistants, nurses, nurse practitioners, and pharmacists.  Additionally, OPDP developed several case studies based on recent enforcement letters. HCP schools can incorporate these case studies into their curriculum to raise awareness about misleading prescription drug promotion. The cases cover a range of promotional materials and touch upon numerous prescription drug promotion issues. Each case includes a facilitator's guide with questions and a detailed answer key.
